GEORGE C. DICKEY

*Such was our friend. Formed on the good old plan,
A true and brave and downright honest man!—
He blew no trumpet in the market place,
Nor in the church with hypocritic face
Supplied with cant the lack of Christian grace;
Loathing pretence, he did with cheerful will
What others talked of while their hands were still;*

*His daily prayer, far better understood
In acts than words, was simply Doing Good.*

CHESTER M. DOWNING

TO THE CLASS OF 1938:

A few years ago I spent some days in a New England college town. One morning I wandered into the library on the campus and saw on the wall the names of those students who had gone to the World War and had never returned. Above the list of names was the sentence "Tout ce que nous avons est pour vous". The significance was clear at once. Those young men were saying to their successors, "All that we have is yours; we can not use these college facilities any longer, but we leave them to you along with whatever good to humanity has come from our sacrifice. All that we might have had is now yours."

This sentence in French lettered in gold upon a library wall seems to me to express the spirit of our American schools and colleges. Where can you find a school that is trying to hold back instruction from people or to render less service this year than last? All the schools I know are seeking constantly to make available to more people the benefits of the finest education they can offer. You, members of the Class of 1938, have lived for years in such an atmosphere. Whatever could be secured in the way of better equipment or better teaching that would make education for you more vital and valuable has been at your disposal. The school has tried to help you master at least one language. It has stood ready to awaken your interest in the best literature. Through class room and laboratory it has been prepared to introduce you to the laws of science. It has drawn aside the curtain through classes in history so that those who would might become acquainted with the past out of which this confused present has come, and it has pointed the way to cooperation and social usefulness in our own day. It has been ready to teach those who cared to learn how to use some of the tools and machines of industry, and it has always insisted that, valuable as such skill of hand or brain might be, what a person is, is of more consequence than what he knows. All these things and more the school has been eager to do for you. Truly it has said, "Tout ce que nous avons est pour vous".

Now the question is what you will do with what you have. Some of you are already aware that faithful work here has provided you with a passport to a more advanced school, and you plan to prepare yourselves by further study for some service that will bring you the enduring satisfactions of life. Some of you believe you are through with school and you want an opportunity at once to render service and to earn money. Fortunately you live in a country where libraries, evening schools, and correspondence courses are available at little or no expense if you later discover that some neglected part of your education stands in the way of happiness or success. But whatever your plans for the immediate future, it seems to me that you should determine to fit yourselves for intelligent citizenship by every means at your disposal. The school has given you a start in this direction, but you need to carry on by reading, listening, thinking, and improving your judgment. In some countries those in authority are saying to the people, "All that you have is ours". If we wish democracy to endure in our country we must pay a price. We must keep informed about political problems and policies; we must vote intelligently, and we must demonstrate our belief that the noblest motive is the public good by considering the public good as of greater importance than our own individual gain. That is not easy to do. It requires real character on the part of citizens to maintain free democratic government. You have been well taught. Show that you have vision, character, and devotion to the public welfare, for the control of The United States of America is passing inevitably into the hands of you graduates and of hosts of others like you "from sea to shining sea".

Cordially yours,

Chester M. Downing,

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1938

HERBERT F. MACY, JR.

There is a poem that says:

“You can always tell a Senior,
He is so gaily dressed.
You can always tell a Junior
By the way he swells his chest.
You can always tell a Sophomore
By his timid looks and such.
You can always tell a Freshman,
But you can't tell him much!”

This is a lie, an untruth, a terminological inexactitude, for when the Class of 1938 first came to the High School as Freshmen, the staid and stable upper-classmen helped and assisted with information as to the location of the rooms assigned the trusting new-comers. It is an infernal nuisance to promenade to the third story of the main building, and then be informed by one in authority that the room one is seeking is in the other building, second floor.

After several days of acclimation and disillusionment, the class elections were held. These elections brought Blondy Ingham to the fore. In spite of his anemic hair, he proved himself a politician, attaining the presidency for himself, and the vice-presidency for Carl Furtado. Jackie Godreau was elected to the Executive Committee, which position she liked so much that she has retained it ever since.

The Freshman year is worthy of note in that it was the only year that rugged individualist, Clayton Enos, had the ambition to affiliate himself with the B. A. A. Moreover, it was then that Benny Freitas began to play football as it should be played. We have it from authoritative sources that the secret of his success was his habit of singing in the locker-rooms. It tired his opponents.

Miss Giguere, of our respected faculty, was astounded to find how few of the class knew anything of the practical side of this thing called the dance. She initiated, therefore, a dancing class in her room, which drew all but the timid Freshmen, who were tracked down and instructed, willy-nilly, in the art. The knowledge thus acquired proved extremely beneficial from a superficial standpoint, but, viewed more practically, it helped to permanently dent many a poor fellow's pocketbook.

Returning from a summer of one thing and another, the erstwhile Freshmen began to assert — positively not exert — themselves a bit more. For instance, Jiggs Harkness joined the High School Band. Jiggs plays the slide trombone. It is positively astonishing how he slides that thing around and about. He is the only person who can satisfactorily chew gum, watch a football game, and play a trombone at one and the same time. Claims it's due to the clashing of his personal inclinations with the propensities of Miss Hastings, the lady who has for a number of years ruled as de facto monarch of the Band. Furthermore, vacation so instilled Dorothy Baker with ambition that she went into the High School Orchestra. Of course, this was merely a side-line, for her real hobby was — and is — to learn cooking.

Politics began the Junior year. John Thor Morgan was elected class president. David Linwood Cahoon acquired the vice-presidency. He enjoyed being in the political graveyard so much, that as a Senior he ran for — and caught — the vice-presidency of the Student Council. Clara Bradbury was made class treasurer, and Dorothy Furtado began her two year job as secretary.

The New Bedford game was won by Fairhaven this year, the last that Benny Freitas was with us. The ensuing bonfire was enjoyed to the full until the Fire Department, displaying rare tact and gallantry, extinguished the conflagration.

George Richardson Proctor — this class is full of comic middle names — contrived to get the vice-presidency of the newly formed Debating Society. His method of debating was highly original, but so was the first Ford. At that, it was worth watching.

The Junior Prom was duly expected, prepared for, held, enjoyed, and cleaned up after. Anne Rogers was elected Queen. From her throne she witnessed the Grand March, which, in all truth, was very impressive. The Gym was decorated with toy balloons. The balloons and Miss Rogers were much sought after. People still keep the balloons. Miss Rogers retains her independence.

Mildred Grindrod and Gertrude Eccleston started out on their careers as cheerleaders. Gert got by all right, but Millie had and has the habit of losing her voice when excited. It often aroused Millie's ire, but from the side-lines, this singular phenomenon was regarded as good local colour.

The first shock for the class as Seniors, was information to the effect that Danny Sullivan had joined the cheerleaders. The action was entirely without precedent, and according to Danny, was absolutely unpremeditated. He was just lonesome.

Stanley Allen reached the class presidency, with Edward J. McDermott as vice-president. John Whelpley, one of those outstanding Mattapoissetteers, was elected to the treasurership, and Dorothy Furtado retained her position as secretary.

Early in the year two newspapers — the word is used here advisedly — merged to form The Tower, an embryonic school news-organ. The Seniors on the staff were: Billy Boyle, Assistant Editor; George Proctor, Exchange Editor; Towner Smith, Circulation Manager; Jimmy McDonough, Sports Editor; Herb Macy, Literary Editor; and Arnold Manchester, Musical Editor. Mr. Lawton was made Faculty Adviser. The paper has been coming up, due largely to Mr. Lawton, but it would seem to have quite some distance to climb before it is worth much, from a literary standpoint.

Malcolm MacGregor Cummings — I said this class had middle names — astonished everybody by bursting into poetry in the early issue of The Huttlestonian. Mac is different; so is his poetry. Speaking of surprises, Allen Harkness ran the Senior Cake Sale successfully, cleared a profit, and did it almost alone. I said 'almost'!

Two presidents need to be accounted for. They are Billy Ames and Clara Bradbury, who served as presidents of the Student Council and of the Honor Society, respectively, and possibly, respectedly.

The cast of the Senior Play included Towner Smith, Gordon Crook, Mary Howland, Billy Boyle, Eleanor Booth, Gertrude Eccleston, Anne Rogers, and George Proctor. They studied long and extensively under the martinet-like supervision of bombastic, capable Miss Hoyle. The play was entitled "Enter the Prodigal". People tell me the only fatted calf was Towner, but, of course, this is mere hearsay.

Some histories end abruptly, other narratives taper off gradually, but all, like this,

End.

ASSEMBLIES, 1937-1938

The assemblies presented to the student body during the past school year were varied in their purposes. Some were held merely for entertainment. Others were for the additional purpose of education. But all were intended to aid the cultural training of the students.

Among the different types of assemblies, those dealing with music always seemed popular. Outstanding among these were two concerts by the Bristol County W. P. A. Band under the direction of Mr. Nelson. Early in September, our own school band was presented the scroll which it had won at Gloucester during the competition there. Another program of this type was the one in which the New Bedford High School orchestra gave us an enjoyable concert.

In addition to musical assemblies, the students were benefited by talks presented by several speakers. Among these were Dr. Thompson's annual Armistice Day Talk, Hedly Hepworth's excellent readings, Mr. Thomas Tripp's biography of Henry Huttleston Rogers, Mr. William Tripp's lecture on the Whaling Museum in New Bedford, and the Reverend L. H. White's travel talk.

The more impressive assemblies included the initiation of new members to the Honor Society, an annual event, and the presentation to the school of a picture of our late principal, Mr. George C. Dickey. At that time, Superintendent Charles F. Prior and the Reverend John H. Maddaford spoke touchingly about Mr. Dickey's splendid character, and the excellent work done by him throughout his life.

Several departments of the school also conducted assembly programs. The Ninth Grade Dramatic Club displayed its ability before the students in the form of a one act play, "The Violin Maker of Cremona". Another story was dramatized by the French pupils, although this was not presented to the students as a body, but, instead, was given one evening to parents and pupils alike. The public speaking class showed its prowess in a program dealing with vocations. Another morning eight members of a Freshman Science Class gave upperclassmen an entertaining exhibition of vacuum tubes, that are interesting in the development of the modern electronic theory of atomic structure.

The usual football rallies were held in the Fall, and the athletic awards were presented in the Spring. An unusual occasion instigated one assembly — the visit of Lady Fairhaven to our town in behalf of the school. She was presented with flowers by the President of The Student Council, and in return spoke a few words to the students.

One problem which confronted the school administration throughout the year was the seating of the increased number of students in the hall. Several systems were tried, but it was deemed best that each class, with the exception of the Seniors, should take its turn in missing an assembly. With the absence of one class there appears to be sufficient room for those who attend.

THE LIBRARY

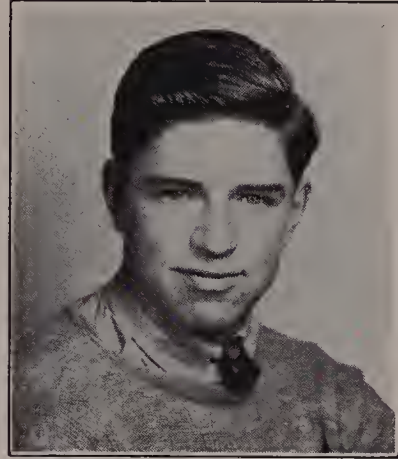

A very jewel among rooms in the Fairhaven High School Elizabethan library. As one enters, the atmosphere is that of a private library rather than of a school-room. Its imported Swedish panel carvings appropriately represent William Shakespeare and Ann Hathaway, while its massive tables are of bog oak from Scotland. The bookcases, with leaded glass doors, contain about 1200 books, many of them gifts of Mr. Rogers. Bronze table-lamps and beautiful pictures, together with the other lovely objects, make the library a veritable gem, cherished by all.

The Fairhaven High School Chapter of the National Honor Society was organized in 1927, and five boys and six girls were initiated as charter members. The total number of members, alumni and active, is one hundred and seventy-five.

When we consider that the purpose of this society is to stimulate in the student body of the Fairhaven High School the four virtues — scholarship, leadership, character, and service, it is easy to understand that the organization has benefited mutually, the school and the chapter members.

The Student Council of Fairhaven High School was formed by our late principal, Mr. George C. Dickey. Its purpose is to give the student body a voice in the policy of the school toward matters of student government.

This year, the Council was influential in securing the privilege of passing through the front doors of the High School at any time. It revised the old Code of Ethics, and discussed various problems brought before the Council by the members as representatives of the students of Fairhaven High School.

The Girls' Athletic Association is a club of Fairhaven High School girls, run solely for the girls, and by the girls. Its aim is to foster and encourage purposeful and competitive recreation.

During the year, a varied program is covered, including hockey, basketball, ping-pong, badminton, tetherball, tenniquoit, volley ball, baseball, tennis, and horseback riding. Although the G. A. A. fosters chiefly intramural competition, the teams have played a few outside games after completing the school programs.

THE ORCHESTRA

The orchestra was first formed in 1926, and was conducted by Clarence Jones of New Bedford. At that time, there was no organized musical training in the schools, and few good players.

As the town became more musically-minded, and more children began taking lessons, people realized that a good High School orchestra was desirable. Mr. F. William Kempf was selected as the new conductor.

Since then, the Fairhaven High School Orchestra has progressed rapidly, and now plays at many functions. It ranks near the Band as a musical organization.

THE BAND

About eleven years ago, the Fairhaven School Board voted to ask Mr. Clarence W. Arey to organize a band. Twenty-odd musicians, some graduates, made up the group selected. Since that time, the band has improved so that it is now a fine musical organization, with about fifty-five players on its roster. Many concerts have been given, and the unselfish efforts on the parts of Miss Hastings, the faculty adviser and band mother, and Mr. Arey, the conductor, together with outside help and student cooperation, have made the Fairhaven High School Band one of the finest in New England.

THE SENIOR PLAY

A LETTER TO THE AUTHOR OF "ENTER THE PRODIGAL"

April 8th

Dear Richard Flournoy:

Do you remember the day in that dingy little Back Bay tea shop, when you first showed me the manuscript of "Enter the Prodigal"? You patted it slightly as you placed it in my hands, and you said, rather whimsically, that its pages held some "very dear people asleep".

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

Then you leaned your elbows on the checked cloth, and you told me the story of those sleeping people — of Father Walters, gentle and loyal; of Mother Walters, excitedly devoted to her loved ones, and quite selfless; of Ernest Walters, a plugging harassed lad, haunted by imaginary responsibilities, and bleakly sacrificing hope before the irascibility of his employer, Mr. Wells.

You dwelt upon the delicately sensitive Mary Walters, who toiled for meager pay in a small department store, and you chuckled aloud when you told of Mrs. Haley, the ubiquitous young matron who suffered from frustrated literary aspirations, and who wrote of black-tressed maidens and bobolinks!

But how your eyes shone, Richard Flournoy, when you mentioned William Walters, the impetuous "Prodigal", who returned home from the city with bitter knowledge of personal failure well concealed beneath a blustering and delightful egotism!

Well I remember, how, at this point, I was carried away by your story, and absently put five lumps of sugar in your tea — you never take more than four — but you didn't seem to notice how remiss I had been, because you were relating how the rascally "Prodigal" ruined the family fortunes, and then miraculously restored them, amplified, and left for the city with a splendid career in prospect, and a potential wife tucked beneath a very affectionate arm.

Then I said:

"I must have that play for my Seniors, Richard Flournoy!"

But you scowled, and suddenly noticed the five lumps, and refused to drink your tea.

You said, "No! Definitely No! Amateurs couldn't act it, and professionals won't so they'll have to sleep — the Walters!"

Then you looked suddenly disarmed, and drank your tea, five lumps and all, and said, "All right; try it, but I'll send the whole cast orchids if they can do it!"

Tonight, Mr. Flournoy, we tried it — we amateurs, and indeed, they all awakened, those thoroughly delightful slumbering Walters of yours!

But you know about it. You were there, in the third row from the back. I spotted you before the curtains parted, and my heart sickened with apprehension. Now, I am wondering, fearfully and rather desolately, what you are thinking.

Did you like Mother Walters? Her name is really Mary, you know, and she was a treasure at rehearsals, despite the fact that we all made fun of the way she walked upon the stage in her little swinging, school-girl skirt.

Did you recognize the Father Walters conjured up by Gordon — Gordon for whom I signed twenty-five after-session slips, and upon whom I squandered every classic word in my vocabulary, together with a few terms savoring of the original Saxon!

Billy drew the plodding Ernest better than you know, for during his rehearsal intermissions, he learned to knit! It was a charming sight to see Gertrude (your Mrs. Haley) aiding him in picking up the dropped stitches in the skirt he helped her to knit!

Our Eleanor, (Mary Walters, to you, Mr. Flournoy) stayed off famine at every rehearsal, and fed an ever-hungry cast. She donated huge bags of cookies which "were" and "gone" in the breath of a thought.

Yet, George, our cantankerous Mr. Wells, has learned bad habits from your play. He commenced unlawfully appropriating other people's yardsticks to use for canes. You have that on your conscience, Mr. Flournoy. It is to your shame that a fine boy has become a "yardstick snitcher"!

Your little heroine, Betty Reid, lived charmingly in Anne — Anne the staunch and sweet who sat long hours waiting for cues.

Towner, of the shrieking trousers and shrinking ways brought the "Prodigal" awake in the midst of a nightmare — Towner who was impervious to insult and who had three great thrills: shooting beebes at unsuspecting backs; taking the telephone to pieces and losing the screws; and placing his feet (admirable in their place) upon polished furniture.

You were not responsible for Allen, my prompter, Mr. Flournoy, but he had the true Walters' spirit. His little feet "twinkled" about after the director while he picked up the things she dropped, and found the countless articles she lost.

But I'm wondering, Mr. Flournoy, what you thought of it, tonight in the third row from the back. Will you always remember and love the delightful Walters as their director will — those Walters who are once more sleeping in your manuscript? Tell me, Mr. Flournoy, do we get those orchids?

Very humbly,

The Director,

M. G. H.

THE DEBATING SOCIETY

In the latter part of 1936, a Junior, Gordon Crook, realizing the pack of possibilities for those pupils desiring to further their ability to debate, attempted to organize a debating club. Permission was received from Mr. Dickey, and Mr. Lawton agreed to assist this movement by acting as faculty adviser. The first officers elected were: Gordon Crook, President; Harold Woodcock, Vice-President; Herbert Macy, Treasurer; and Isabel Tuel, Secretary.

The club got off to an excellent start, many debates being held during the year. The members visited several debates of near-by schools in order to understand more fully the intricacies involved in argumentation.

Although several challenges were received by us from other schools, they were refused because of inexperience on the part of the majority of the club members. However, a challenge from New Bedford High School was finally accepted. The Fairhaven team, consisting of Harold Woodcock, Shirley Kanter, Gordon Crook, and Isabel Tuel, was defeated by a 2-1 decision at the debate, which was held near the end of the school year.

The officers elected for the '37-38 year were: Gordon Crook, President; Joseph Cohen, Vice-President; Herbert Macy, Treasurer; and George Proctor, Secretary. Debates this year have been entirely intramural.

It is the hope of the club and its officers to develop an organization which will last. Our belief is that this can be accomplished only by using a system such as is in existence in New Bedford High School. Under this system the members of the Fairhaven High Debating Society would receive credit amounting to $\frac{1}{2}$ point per school year. Meetings would be held one afternoon each week, and members would be required to attend "class" in order to receive credit. Under such a system the development of good debating teams could be assured.

COLLEGE ENGLISH IV

No book of this nature would be complete without the inclusion of a classroom picture. Here we see a typical Senior Class. Its members are engaged in the intriguing task of studying Macbeth — note the absorbed and interested expressions! The teacher is silhouetted against the window in a helpful attitude. This view represents, as nearly as possible, a cross-section of the Class of 1938.

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

The first issue of The Huttlestonian appeared in 1923. The surplus earnings were set aside for a scholarship fund to be known as The Huttlestonian Scholarship Loan Fund — the first in the Fairhaven High School. Since that time, every edition of the magazine has added to the original sum, so that, in all, more than 3,000 dollars has been earned. By the help of this scholarship, many students have obtained a college education that otherwise they could not have hoped for. The magazine was issued twice yearly until 1934. At that time, publication was suspended because of the business depression, but was resumed in 1936, after an enterprising Junior class in College English decided to edit its own number to give special aid to a student then at Harvard University. The venture was successful, and over 100 dollars was realized.

In addition to the aid given to students, other useful things have been accomplished. The fine piano in the Old Assembly Hall was purchased partly by Huttlestonian money, also the radio-phonograph, furnishings in the teachers' room, the stereoptican, and The Huttlestonian service cup, awarded yearly to the boy and girl of the Senior Class who have earned the highest number of service points during their high school courses.

The Huttlestonian, a magazine of high literary value, has won many prizes in national contests with other school publications. The following letter is a testimonial of the high standard of The Huttlestonian.

Adviser, The Huttlestonian
Fairhaven High School
Fairhaven, Mass.

November 8, 1934.

Dear Adviser:

Your magazine, The Huttlestonian, has been recommended to me by the Quill and Scroll Society as one of the best in the country. I should like very much to see a copy and show it to the staff of our "John Quill", a semi-annual publication which we are transforming into a magazine more and more.

In hopes that you can spare a copy of a recent issue, I am enclosing ten cents to cover the cost of sending it to me at the above address. If you wish, I will see that you receive a copy of the next "John Quill".

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) WARD S. MILLER,
Adviser of Publication

“THE TOWER”

The formation of the Fairhaven High School newspaper was an unique occurrence. Instead of being the spontaneous brain-child of some ambitious person, it was the result of the merger of two unofficial sheets, “The Amalgamated Daily Transcript” and “The Daily Blah”. These exuberent rivals gushed streams of wit upon the student body for some time, until the more neutral members of the staffs realized that it would be best to combine and publish a really worth while, official school paper. After much bickering and many meetings, a satisfactory coalition was arranged, and the new publication named “The Tower”.

The staff for 1937-1938 was as follows: Editor, John McDonough; Assistant, James McDonough; Literary notes, Herbert Macy; Exchange, Herbert Murray; Music, Arnold Manchester; Columnists, Beverly Augusta, John O’ Donnell; Business Manager, Thomas Hurley; Cartoonist, William Finley; Circulation Manager, John Hurley; Publicity, Towner Smith; Publication Manager, Joseph Pare; Faculty Adviser, Mr. Robert Lawton.

“The Tower” has in every way been a success. It has contained usually about eight pages. School scandals were printed in the gossip columns, and the news was up-to-date. Gossip included everything from puppy love to Miss Hoyle’s beautiful maggotty herring. Besides these duties, the paper has performed many other services to the school, such as gifts to outstanding intramural basketball players, flowers to the teacher whose room purchased the largest number of subscriptions, and the purchase of a mimeoscope that will be very useful to the school in future years.

REPRESENTATIVES TO THE NEW BEDFORD
WOMAN'S CLUB

ELEANOR BOOTH

MARY HOWLAND

It has been the custom, during several years, for the high schools of Greater New Bedford to elect representatives to the New Bedford Woman's Club.

This year, two students, Mary Howland and Eleanor Booth, were chosen from the Senior Class to represent our school. Upon their election, they were given guest tickets, which entitled them to be present at all the meetings and social functions of the club. Although school work prevented them from going to the clubhouse regularly, a few programs were enjoyed.

Of those meetings which they did attend, the one which interested them the most was an illustrated lecture on China by a local pastor. This was their first visit to the clubhouse. They were made to feel at home, and were introduced to the officers of the club, and to the representatives of other schools.

This contact with the women of Greater New Bedford has been wholly successful, in that it has helped the students realize the good work accomplished by such a group, and has shown them the advantages of membership in that organization.

THE CAFETERIA

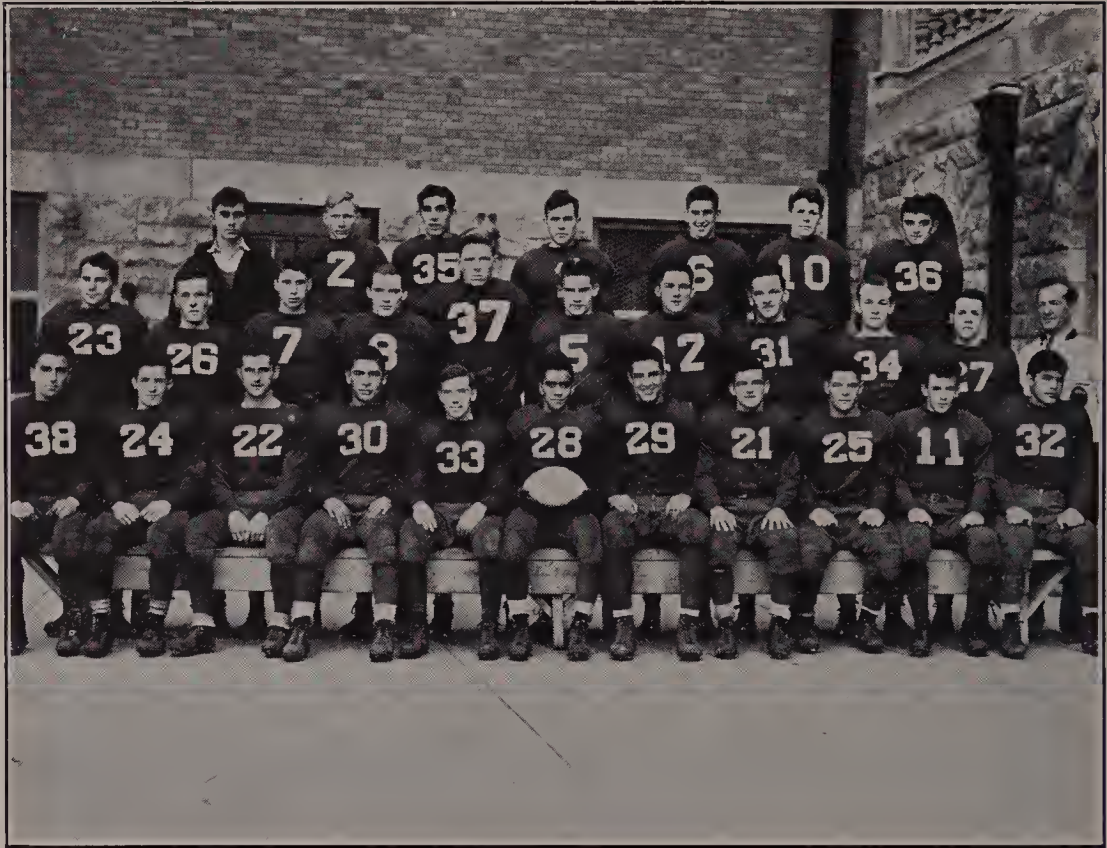

The Fairhaven High School Cafeteria is a non-profit-making organization that exists to serve the students wholesome, well-balanced meals. The main thought in the planning of the lunches is health, and the menus are made up with this in mind. Most of the food is prepared in the school. Only the best quality meats and groceries are bought, and in wide variety.

Miss Strong is the able entrepreneur who keeps things running smoothly. She has three women who regularly assist her, and some students who help at recess.

About two hundred students are served daily, some purchasing entire meals and others milk, soups, sandwiches, and desserts to supplement lunches brought from home.

ATHLETICS

FOOTBALL

A good football season was climaxed by dropping a hard-fought game to the crimson boys from New Bedford. Fairhaven had a heavy team and a light backfield, which functioned occasionally. A close tie game was played with Durfee.

F. H. S. was honored by the placing of two members of its team on the Bristol County eleven. These were Captain John Silva, and John Morgan, flashy half back.

The regular players were as follows: Captain Silva, Allen, Archambault, McDermott, Roberts, Huggard, Stitt, Gubellini, Morgan, Bradford, Fortin, Carr, McDonough, Machado, Pifko, Furtado, Cummings, and Lussier.

These are the games and scores of the season: Fairhaven 6—Dartmouth 6; Fairhaven 0—New Bedford 7; Fairhaven 20—East Providence 6; Fairhaven 7—Durfee 7; Fairhaven 0—Whitman 12; Fairhaven 7—Attleboro 0; Fairhaven 12—Taunton 0; Fairhaven 6—Barnstable 0.

BASKETBALL

The year 1938 found Fairhaven High represented on the basketball court by a rangy five, of whom much was expected. The boys lived up to all expectations, winning eleven games out of the nineteen played, and finishing runners-up in the South Shore Tournament. The first team consisted of the following: Capt. John Thor Morgan, John Silva, James McDonough, Ray Archambault, and Lester Patasini. Their able assistants were Andrew Pifko, Gene Skoniezy, Henry Fortin and several others. John Silva made the All-Bristol Team, while Ray Archambault was the high scorer for the county. The latter is also the only regular returning, and it is about him and Captain-Elect Skoniezy that Coach Sezak must build his next season's team.

The second year of Intra-Mural League Basketball saw the purples, who included Capt. Tom Hurley, John Hughes, John McDonough, John Hendriques, Courtney Patasini, Joseph Cohen, Jack O'Donell, and Allen Booth, win the pennant, while the Blue won the Tournament.

TRACK

This year, the track squad, as a whole, has done remarkably well in view of the stiff competition which they have faced. One of the main objects of the present season is to defend their track and field championship at the South Shore Tournament in Brockton.

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

BASEBALL

The Fairhaven Baseball Team began a very tough 23 game schedule on April 16, 1938, with a victory over the New Bedford Boy's Club. Although quite a few games were lost, the team never gave up its fighting spirit. The boys suffered a severe setback when James McDonough, the captain, broke his finger. With the season half over, the team had a record of 3 wins, 7 defeats, and 1 tie.

THE HUTTLESTONIAN

THE CHEERLEADERS

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

The Fairhaven High School girls enjoyed an excellent basketball season. This year, there was not only a varsity team, but also intramural groups, giving every enthusiastic girl an opportunity for sport.

The following is a lineup of the intramural games:

The Blue team consisted of: B. Ponte, E. Sylvia, D. Smith, (Capt.), P. Ainsworth, S. Thompson, and L. Lacerda.

The Black team: M. Perry, R. Heuberger (Capt.), T. Jason, V. Alvers, L. Anesti, E. Silveira, and M. Wilbur.

The Green team: M. Quinn (Capt.), G. Spooner, P. Ogden, M. Tinkham, A. Malon, J. Chassi, C. Bradbury.

The Red Team: A. Benz, N. Jason, J. Mulvey, D. Erickson (Capt.), K. Sullivan, M. Sylvia, and D. Pearce.

The Yellow Team: M. Andrews, T. Prucha, G. Poenack (Capt.), S. Blechenger, L. Eldredge, D. Stevens, E. Roderick.

GIRLS' HOCKEY

The girls' hockey team began its season at a game with Dartmouth. Ensuing contests were, on the whole, very successful. The line-up was as follows: Mary Perry, Dorothy Furtado, Evelyn Silveira, Virginia Alvers, Lucy Anesti, Katherine Sullivan, Caroline Gottschalk, Elsie Handy, Emily Laronda, Norma Jason, Marjolaine Gault, Dorothy Smith, Albert Benz, Ruth Heuberger, Alice Maloney, Thelma Jason, Gertrude Spooner, Doris Erickson, Margaret Quinn, and Marion Tinkham.

There was also intramural competition, which proved to be time well spent, causing the girls to become healthier and more sports-minded. Miss Virginia Arnold, gym instructor for the girls, and Mrs. Geraldine Sylvia generously gave their services at the games.
